Unheralded in the Excelsior display is a new model. It is essentially the two-speed 98 c.c. Goblin engine unit in the frame of the 125 c.c. model. The gears are operated by a rocking pedal on the near side, and the primary chain case cover is modified to take a kick-starter. The exhaust system consists of an expansion box below the engine, leading from which there is a chromium-plated pipe to a cylindrical silencer beside the rear wheel. Other details are a wedge-shaped tank under the top frame tube and 2.50x19in tyres. The finish in maroon and cream is attractive. In Belgium the price is 16,000 francs, say, £90. In the new model category are the Belgian Gillet 250 c.c. machines. One, the two-speed...
