ALLDAYS & ONIONS, BIRMINGHAM. (151)
The large display of Alldays machines contains very little that is altered for 1907. There is a new back fork bridge, and the front mud-guards extend in front of the fork crown. There is also a slight change in the tube sizes in some, and in fittings such as Brooks saddles on the Matchless, which is also equipped with Sturmey-Archer three-speed gear, or Crabbe, as desired. The Imperial, too, is now fitted with metal gear-case. A very fine line in tradesmen's carriers is shown, in which the steering-wheel spindles
